Course Description

This course surveys the social, cultural, economic, and political history of Latin America from the independence period to the present. We will devote special attention to understanding the structural conditions that resulted in the collapse of the Spanish and Portuguese empires, and the way these conditions developed over the next 200 years. The class also focuses on Native Americans, Europeans, and Africans, and the way that these groups and their interactions shaped Latin American society today.

To understand Latin America’s existing nation-states, societies and cultures and Latinos in the U.S. – a skill increasingly in demand in business, education, health, and government – one must use a broad lens. This course provides an introductory overview of the history and culture of the peoples of Latin America and the Caribbean from an interdisciplinary perspective.

Rather than solely focusing on Latin America from an outsider’s point of view, we will seek to give full weight to how Latin Americans understood themselves and their development. We will analyze how the culture, economics, and politics of the region developed interdependently yet separately from that of the United States and Europe.

In studying the nineteenth century, we will study Latin America as a whole. Following this hemispheric study, we will focus on specific countries that best illustrate the most significant regional trends. We will analyze the period’s significant events and movements and reach conclusions on defining themes in Latin American history.

Students will increase their understanding of the diverse nation-states that emerged from the revolutionary turmoil of the late eighteenth and early nineteenth centuries. This will prepare them to make informed observations and judgments about the contemporary political, economic, social, and cultural realities found in Latin America, the Caribbean, and the United States.

The class moves both chronologically and thematically, covering topics such as political economy, nationalism and national identities, U.S.-Latin American and Caribbean relations, transnational Latino migration, gender, slavery, human rights, and popular culture. It also focuses on questions of democratic representation, the struggles of different social sectors for political, social, cultural, and economic inclusion, and the ways in which these struggles have been repressed, accommodated, absorbed, or ignored. We will approach the hemisphere comparatively, drawing similarities and differences between different nation-states.

By endlessly contradicting the ridiculous assertions of the standard liberal narrative, we end up trapped by that same narrative. Their values just as much as their lives, have colonized our minds and our histories. It’s not rejection that we seek; proving them wrong does nothing, it’s only when we ignore them and retake our story on our terms as innocents that we are truly setting ourselves free.

Learning Intentions

- organize individual ideas to form thoughtful arguments
- form rigorous linguistic models to express logical conclusions
- general understanding of Latin America historically and contemporaneously

Course Requirements / Grades

1) Attend all classes. Students are expected to arrive to class having read the material, prepared to be engaged in discussions, and ready and willing to contribute to making the classroom a friendly and respectful environment. Absences for medical reasons, religious observances, or family emergencies must be documented in writing in order to be counted as excused absences. Students with more than two unexcused absences should expect no higher than a “B” in this class.

2) Take all quizzes. Readings should be done before coming to class on Monday. There will be several unannounced quizzes over the course of the semester. The purpose of these quizzes is to hold students accountable for having done the reading, so as to make our discussions more fruitful; therefore, the quizzes will usually be given at the beginning of class, not at the end, after the discussion has already taken place. There will be no opportunity to make up quizzes missed, so each missed quiz would be counted as “zero”; the only exception will be in the case of an excused absence, which (see above) requires written documentation. If you arrive to class late, you run the risk of missing a quiz, so you should be punctual.

Assignments and Grading:
"There is no curve; there may be a tube or barrel or a pyramid, on its base or summit, depending on the distribution of the quality of work." J. Womack.

The structure and focus of the class is subject to change based on student input and/or angry deities.

If you miss class check the syllabus and get notes from a companion. Then come see me. Please do not email asking what you missed. This is all you need to know:

Did I Miss Anything?

Nothing. When we realized you weren't here we sat with our hands folded on our desks in silence, for the full two hours.

Everything. I gave an exam worth 40 percent of the grade for this term and assigned some reading due today on which I'm about to hand out a quiz worth 50 percent.

Nothing. None of the content of this course has value or meaning. Take as many days off as you like: any activities we undertake as a class I assure you will not matter either to you or me and are without purpose.

Everything. A few minutes after we began last time a shaft of light suddenly descended and an angel or other heavenly being appeared and revealed to us what each woman or man must do to attain divine wisdom in this life and the hereafter. This is the last time the class will meet before we disperse to bring the good news to all people on earth.

Nothing. When you are not present how could something significant occur?

Everything. Contained in this classroom is a microcosm of human experience assembled for you to query and examine and ponder. This is not the only place such an opportunity has been gathered.

but it was one place

And you weren't here

The goal of the assignments is twofold. Increase knowledge of the class subject while building core academic skills. Therefore I will try to give you all the feedback possible. My notations and comments on your work are designed to help you understand your grade while highlighting areas and ways of improvement. Underlined, crossed out, and circled sentences indicate an area of interest, usually accompanied by a comment and/or one of the following abbreviations.

- [RW] Rewrite
- [DNF] Does Not Follow
- [SOP] Standard Operating Procedure
- [AN] Anachronistic
- [RTP] Refer to Prompt
- [FT] Format
- [CC] Chronological Consistency
- [✔] Good Point
- [NAS] Non-Academic Source

Academic Honesty:

- Uconn does not tolerate plagiarism, cheating, or helping others to cheat.
- Plagiarism is defined as misrepresenting the work of others (whether published or not) as your own. It may be inadvertent or intentional.
- Any facts, statistics, quotations, or paraphrasing of any information that is not common knowledge, must be cited.
